— National award recognizes firms and L&D practitioners for workforce development initiatives with significant results —

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Charlottesville, Va. - October 15, 2015 - Scitent, Inc., a full-service eLearning company dedicated to the growth of an organization's eLearning business, today announced it received the Bronze Learning in Practice Award for Excellence in Community Service from Chief Learning Officer magazine at its annual Fall Conference, October 12-14, 2015, in Austin, Texas.

Published by Human Capital Media (HCM), the largest integrated media company in the human resources industry, Chief Learning Officer's annual awards recognize outstanding enterprise education leaders, departments and vendors who have developed and implemented exemplary learning and development programs that produce measurable results for their companies.

Scitent was recognized for the development of online continuing medical education courses for its client, The Medical Cannabis Institute, a global leader in medical cannabis education for healthcare professionals around the globe.

"The Learning In Practice awards celebrate the truly outstanding work of practitioners in the L&D field," said Mike Prokopeak, editor in chief of Chief Learning Officer. "Scitent's win in the Excellence in Community Service category is a recognition of the company's commitment to the advancement of the industry and to serving the needs of the community."

Deb McMahon, president and CEO of Scitent, said she is thrilled with the recognition the Charlottesville-based company has received through the Learning In Practice Award. "We're celebrating our 20th anniversary this year and from the beginning, we've been dedicated to helping healthcare personnel utilize eLearning to deliver the best patient care, and to train other professionals in their industry's best practices."
